Remarks :

Who is she?
Few names carry as much weight in serious sportfishing as Egg Harbor. Built in New Jersey and refined over decades of bluewater punishment, the 43 Sport Fisherman is the marque at its most purposeful - a tournament-ready machine with the range, the muscle, and the cockpit to go hunting wherever the fish are running.
This 2004 example sits in Morocco, perfectly positioned for some of the most prolific big-game fishing grounds in the Atlantic. Bluefin, swordfish, marlin - the location alone is a reason to look twice. The platform makes it twice as compelling.
The Fishing
The cockpit is built around the fight. Fighting chair, transom door, livewell, and rodholders arranged for serious offshore work - not weekend dabbling. When something big takes the bait off the Moroccan coast, this is exactly where you want to be standing.
The Boat
Twin diesels, flybridge helm, and a layout refined over years of production make the Egg Harbor 43 as capable on the run out as it is on the grounds. Below decks, the accommodation is comfortable without being fussy - a proper galley, heads, and enough berths to keep a fishing crew fed and rested between sessions.
Build quality is what you'd expect from a yard that spent four decades building boats for people who actually use them hard.
