2004 Beneteau 57 Centre Cockpit
3 Cabins + 1 Crew Cabin | 4 Heads | EU VAT Paid
Originally launched in 2004, ARTEMIS is an exceptional example of the highly regarded Beneteau 57 Centre Cockpit, a true blue-water cruising yacht designed by Bruce Farr and built for effortless long-distance sailing and liveaboard comfort.
Easily managed by a small crew, ARTEMIS is equipped with in-mast furling mainsail, electric genoa furling, and a suite of electric winches, providing smooth and efficient sail handling. Her design delivers both impressive offshore performance and luxurious onboard comfort.
Below decks, the yacht features the desirable 3-cabin plus crew layout, including:

- A spacious full-beam owner's suite aft with en-suite facilities
- Two mirrored double guest cabins forward, each with private en-suite heads
- An additional day head conveniently located by the companionway, also serving the crew cabin accessed via the aft walkthrough

With her combination of performance, ease of handling, and elegant accommodations, ARTEMIS is perfectly suited for those seeking a capable and refined long-range cruiser.

Accommodation :

- 3-cabin + crew, 4-heads interior layout
- Reverse-cycle air conditioning in all cabins and saloon
- Davits for tender
- Centre-console RIB tender with 20hp outboard
- Forward sun deck cushions

Yachting Press Summary
Praised by leading yachting magazines as "a world-class yacht and an excellent big-boat value," the Beneteau 57 was hailed as a milestone design – combining Bruce Farr's renowned performance hull with luxurious, handcrafted interiors and effortless handling. Reviewers highlighted her balance under sail, soft motion at sea, and the craftsmanship of her interior fit-out.
