The White Shark 236 is one of those boats that have built the brand's reputation: a hull renowned for its sea-keeping abilities, a true sense of security on board, and rare versatility for a trailerable unit of this size.

This 2005 Cabin version features a particularly sought-after configuration with its twin Yamaha 115 HP 4-stroke engines. This setup not only provides excellent balance to the boat but also adds extra safety while underway, highly valued for offshore trips as well as family outings.

The White Shark 236 immediately stands out for its seakeeping behavior. The hull remains stable and comfortable in choppy conditions, with remarkable stability when stationary. Itâ€™s a boat that inspires confidence, whether for fishing, leisure outings, or full days at sea.

The two Yamahas have approximately 900 hours and have always been professionally serviced annually. The entire mechanical system runs perfectly and reflects the care given to the boat over the years. The White Shark 236 presented here is far from the neglected or worn-out boats sometimes found on the market: it is a clean, well-maintained, and consistently cared-for unit.

On board, movement is smooth and secure. The spacious cockpit allows for comfortable use whether fishing or cruising, while the cabin adds real value in terms of storage, comfort, and versatility. The forward sunbathing area, aft platforms, and existing equipment further enhance the boatâ€™s overall appeal.

Its overall condition, the cleanliness of the engines, and the general presentation immediately reflect the maintenance it has received.

The White Shark 236 remains a safe bet for enthusiasts of serious marine hulls looking for a reliable, versatile boat capable of delivering as much enjoyment while underway as peace of mind at sea. More details and pictures on xboat.uk
